

THE EXPLORER 1984

the 1990s, the number of people with a mental health problem has increased by 50% (Mental Health Foundation 2000).

There is a growing awareness of the need to address the needs of people with mental health problems, and the importance of providing them with appropriate services. This has led to a number of initiatives, including the development of mental health services, the establishment of mental health trusts, and the implementation of mental health legislation.

The purpose of this paper is to review the current state of mental health services in the UK, and to discuss the challenges facing mental health services in the future. The paper will first review the current state of mental health services in the UK, and then discuss the challenges facing mental health services in the future.

The current state of mental health services in the UK is characterized by a number of challenges. These include a shortage of mental health professionals, a lack of funding, and a need for more integrated services.

The shortage of mental health professionals is a major challenge facing mental health services in the UK. This is due to a number of factors, including a lack of training opportunities, a low salary, and a high level of stress.

A lack of funding is another major challenge facing mental health services in the UK. This is due to a number of factors, including a reduction in government spending, and a need for more services.

The need for more integrated services is a third major challenge facing mental health services in the UK. This is due to a number of factors, including a need for more coordination between different services, and a need for more information sharing.

In conclusion, the current state of mental health services in the UK is characterized by a number of challenges. These include a shortage of mental health professionals, a lack of funding, and a need for more integrated services.

The challenges facing mental health services in the future are likely to be even more significant. This is due to a number of factors, including a growing number of people with mental health problems, and a need for more services.

It is therefore essential that mental health services are able to meet the challenges facing them in the future. This will require a number of measures, including increasing the number of mental health professionals, increasing funding, and developing more integrated services.

The purpose of this paper is to review the current state of mental health services in the UK, and to discuss the challenges facing mental health services in the future. The paper will first review the current state of mental health services in the UK, and then discuss the challenges facing mental health services in the future.

The current state of mental health services in the UK is characterized by a number of challenges. These include a shortage of mental health professionals, a lack of funding, and a need for more integrated services.

*I remember the day before I started school at Marquette,
My dad said to me, "I know something on which you can bet . . .
You may not believe it, but despite all the heartaches, hardships, and strife,
Someday you'll look back and say, 'My years of high school were the best of my life.' "*
*I listened closely to what my dad had said; I really thought it through.
So thus I started as a Freshman with an optimistic view.
I survived the first few days with all the accompanying worries and fears,
And so I settled down to labor for four long dreary years.
The teachers were relentless, and drove us students like slaves,
And they constantly gave out "ninth hours" to try to make us behave.
I crammed for exams, and did hours of work.
I did reports and assignments 'til I was going berserk.
I began to think my dad was crazy, from what he had said.
By the time high school is over, I'll probably be dead.
But through all the blood, sweat, and tears, I somehow survived,
At last I'm a Senior, and I'm still alive.
Looking back now, I remember all the good times I had.
I suppose that high school really wasn't that bad.
I have made friends, whom I'll never forget;
If it wasn't for high school, we would never have met.
How can I forget all those great parties and dances,
And the wonder and thrill of my teenage romances?
At the Explorers football games, we had such a blast,
But now all of that fun is part of my past.
Being here at Marquette has really changed me a lot;
I have the education and knowledge for which I had sought.
I gained maturity and wisdom along the rocky way,
I am ready to face tomorrow and the challenge of today.
Well, senior year is almost over, and graduation is soon in sight.
Looking back to what my father had said, I suppose that he was right.*

"Greg, what are you looking at?"

Yeah, I finally got it once!

Man, she is really cute!

"Figures," we wouldn't stop him.

Playing both ways is really tough.

Well, there's another first down.

The only thing I could tackle!

Louis, would you mind getting off my leg?

Looks like Steve's in for a good night.

How much longer 'till this one is over?

Aw shucks, I forgot to wear my ty!

I'm having a ball!

Gosh, I'm good lookin'!

Mommy, I've got an itch.

How long do I have to sit here?

Oh, pretty little ole' me

No, I'm not surprised; why do you ask?

Shirley Temple?

Cock a Doodle Doo.

Take me out to the ball game.

Why do I have to hold this fuzzy thing?

Obvious bewilderment.

Picture perfect.

*And now the sun begins to set
O'er the valley of our high school years.
It seems it really shouldn't yet.
It may bring joy, it may bring tears.*

*We've gained a bountiful crop of knowledge
To help us in our days at college.
And elsewhere we may future go
We'll spread our ideas to and fro.*

*We've made new friendships that will never end.
And there's nothing better than a friend,
To help us through times good and bad,
To be there always to make us feel glad.*

*But now our days come to a close,
And every one of us knows
That the friends we've made are ours forever.
And will we lose them? NEVER!*

*So in all our days from January to December
In any years we will remember
Our bygone days at M.H.S.
And we'll remember they were the best.*
